Town twinning serves as a bridge between citizens, cultures and traditions. It connects in particular two peoples with each other.

As the 2016 Capital of Culture, Breslau shows in its full dynamic range that from its historical past it has regained its former greatness and importance in looking to the future. This can be seen in the German and Polish architecture of the cityscape and is perceptible in the creative, open and aspiring attitude of the younger generation.

In the future, it is also important to promote the cheerfulness and agility of young people in contacts and encounters as the basis for international understanding and a world of peace.
