

Görlitz

Twinned with since 1990

Siegfried Deinege

It is especially important that citizens experience town twinning at first hand. In the more than 25 years in which Wiesbaden and Görlitz have been twinned, we can list a whole number of examples of excellent contacts. Considering our work for the next generation in our twinning relationship, I am very impressed by the cooperation of the Helene-Lange School in Wiesbaden with Görlitz social services as a particular example. In addition, in 2015 we encouraged and adopted a trainee exchange programme. The aim is to get to know each other, both the administrative structures and routine work, as well as establish very personal contacts. This is a positive and essential foundation for the future of an authentically experienced town twinning.

We want to intensify and expand our existing contacts. We can learn from each other in all areas of life. And what we as citizens of Görlitz experienced so wonderfully in the period following reunification in terms of active support from the people of Wiesbaden is an important experience from the past, which will also shape our trusting and cordial cooperation in future. I am particularly glad that as twinned cities we bring young people closer together and get the next generation inspired by our twinning programme. It is a branch of a tree we share that always bears more fruit.
